

ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICES

Women's Health consolidated its administrative offices in one location (they had previously occupied three separate facilities) at 200 South Meridian Street in downtown Indianapolis, Indiana.

The program called for the creation of a fun, open, and highly interactive office environment within a limited budget and an aggressive schedule. The plan is organized around a large, central, and interior space flanked on two sides by private offices and the third side by support spaces, including a break room.

The design solution included modular carpet tiles, exposing the ceiling, indirect lighting, the celebration of the existing structure (timber, concrete, and steel), translucent sidelights to allow natural light deep in the open space, new system furniture and seating, as well as a varied and colorful palette.
